PRESAGE A REPLY
TO LEAGUE APPEAL*Italian Government Summons
Deputy Secretary-General
To Rome*IS LEAGUE OFFICIAL*Pilotti No Longer Represents Italy; Is Eminent
Jurist

GENEVA, Mar. 6—(INS)—Possibly presaging an Italian reply to the League of Nations' appeal for peace negotiations, the Italian Government has summoned Massimo Pilotti, deputy secretary-general of the League, to Rome for a conference, it was learned today. He is due there today.

Although Pilotti was once an Italian delegate to the League, he is now an official of the League itself and no longer represents Italy. He is considered one of the most eminent of Geneva jurists.

Ethiopia followed up her speedy acceptance of the League's offer with a protest today against the reported bombardment of an English ambulance outfit near Quorum.

ADDIS ABABA, Mar. 6—(INS)—Major General Achilles Burgoyne, 62-year-old Englishman who was entrusted by Emperor Haile Selassie with the organization of an Ethiopian Red Cross unit, was killed by an Italian aerial bomb while retreating with Ras Kibed's troops from Amba Alazi to Quorum, it was reliably reported here today.

Major Burgoyne's unit was bombed by Italian airplanes several weeks ago and his tent was hit and much of his medical equipment destroyed. The killing of Major Burgoyne, it is understood, has no connection with Wednesday's bombing of an all-British hospital camp near Quorum.

Addis Ababa was thrown into a panic today when an Italian tri-motor bomber appeared over the capital and lazily circled for an hour and a quarter.

It flew off when machine gun fire opened from the ground, and Ethiopians now fear it will return on a bombing mission as a result of the ground fire.

Two Chinamen Fined For Misrepresentation

Two Chinamen from Philadelphia paid fines of $50 and costs, yesterday when arrested by the Highway Patrolmen conducting tests for drivers' licenses here.

Louie Cheung, 1318 Green street, Philadelphia, was charged with displaying a permit not his own, and Harry Louie, 4748 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, was charged with lending a learner's permit to another person.

Both arrests were made by Corporal A. L. Henry.

It appears that while taking the test and being questioned, Cheung became confused and gave his right name, instead of the name of Louie. The patrolman then questioned them further and looking in their hats identified them by the initials therein.

The men were taken before Justice of Peace James Guy and given a hearing. They admitted the violation and said that Louie had tried to take the test in Philadelphia on Wednesday, but had been rejected, so they agreed that they should come to Bristol and Cheung take the test for his friend.

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 6—Charged with riding on a rack fastened on the rear of a Greyhound Line bus, William Vincent Brown, of 138 Jefferson street, Trenton, N. J., was committed to the county jail at Doylestown for five days by Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan. Brown was arrested by State Highway Patrolman C. A. Jones, after he had been chased off the bus on several occasions.

William James Sofield, of Somerdale, N. J., was fined $50 and costs by Squire Nolan on a charge of driving an overloaded truck. According to Corporal R. D. Evans, of the State Highway Patrol, who made the arrest, the truck was 4,900 pounds overweight.

For having an overweight of 8,700 pounds on his truck, James Eaton, of 2705 Jefferson street, Philadelphia, was fined $50 and costs. Patrolman S. P. Carfagno, of the State Highway Patrol, made the arrest. Nolan heard the case.

Harold Gitow, of Philadelphia; John S. Fawcsey, of Melrose Park; Stacy Tetterer, of Morrisville, were each fined $10 and costs for driving without a 1936 operator's license. Constable Edward Roberts arrested Gitow and Fawcsey, while State Highway Patrolman C. W. Reitz apprehended Tetterer. All were arraigned before Judge Nolan.

J. D. Rohrer, of Philadelphia, was fined $5 and costs for not carrying his operator's license. He was arrested by Constable Edward Roberts and arraigned before Nolan.

"Punishment" of General Hagood Is an Affront to Congress

(New York American, February 29, 1936)

Unless Congress is without a shred of self-respect or any sense of its high prerogative as an independent branch of the Government, it will perceive that the dismissal of General Johnson Hagood is an insult to itself and another despotic encroachment on its proper functions.

CONGRESS IS THE HIGH COUNCIL OF THE NATION!

Its summoning of a witness to give it needed facts or opinions for its guidance in legislation is a COMMAND ON BEHALF OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

It has a RIGHT to all the facts within the knowledge of a witness, and to his opinion, if asked, as a help in the formation of its own judgment and the shaping of its legislative course.

It can disregard, if it wishes, a "rule" or a tradition of the Service, as in the case of an Army officer, who might rely on one or the other to evade questions or withhold information.

No one can deprive Congress of this right, nor qualify or destroy it.

Its preservation, however, demands of Congress that the latter shall PROTECT ITS WITNESS.

No one should suffer for doing his duty, and certainly not a witness before a Congressional Committee.

The case of General Hagood, however, has additional elements which aggravate the guilt of the Administration.

He was assured by his superior officer, the Chief of Staff, that he was PERFECTLY FREE TO EXPRESS ANY OPINION, OR ANSWER ANY QUESTIONS FROM THE COMMITTEE.

At the outset of his testimony he asked to have it understood that he was not present as an advocate nor to urge appropriations.

Having experienced difficulty getting moderate sums for urgent military needs, and contrasting the heedless pouring of money into boondoggling projects and other Brain Trust fantasies, the General spoke from his own observation of the workings of the WPA and the CCC.

"It is harder for me to get five cents to buy a lead pencil than to get $1,000 to teach hobbies to the CCC boys. . . . They don't have to come up to Government specifications. One man can be taught to collect postage stamps, while another man can be encouraged to take an interest in butterflies. Under the WPA I can get $200 to build a gravel walk to the garden house, but I cannot get $10 to repair a busted steam pipe."

By such frank and honest statements, the General undoubtedly was seeking to impress Congress with the contrast between rational expenditure for genuine needs, and the wanton waste of public money by the countless alphabetical agencies of our giant bureaucracy.

When he concluded, the chairman on behalf of the committee, expressed APPRECIATION OF HIS ATTENDANCE AND THE PLEASURE OF CONFERRING WITH HIM.

The session had been private. The testimony given was eminently proper and pertinent to the subject under consideration.

Nevertheless, a jittery, vain, hypersensitive and swollen-

Town*TO USE 6-FOOT LETTERS

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 6—Morrisville has been selected as one of the 492 towns in Pennsylvania for one of the airmarkers to provide safer flying in the State. This announcement was made by John B. Kelly, of the Division of Aeronautics of the Department of Revenue.

The airmarker will consist of a large sign painted on top of one of the buildings of the Vulcanized Rubber Company. The word Morrisville will be painted in six-foot letters. The marker will be painted in chrome yellow with aluminum base.

The work of marking these towns, which is a WPA project, will begin as soon as warm weather arrives. These airmarkers will make it impossible for a pilot to fly more than 15 miles without seeing one of these signs.

Designed as a safety factor for airplane pilots in inclement weather, the airmarking work is included in the WPA $15,000,000 aviation development in this State. About 300 men will be employed for approximately three months on the marking job, at a total cost of $65,543.29, it was announced.

In selecting locations for the markers, the State was laid out in 15-mile squares, with airmarkers designated at towns situated as closely as possible to the intersection of the lines. Care was taken to locate the markers along routes easily followed in bad weather, such as railroad tracks, highways, etc.

Mr. Tomlinson To Head
Pomona of Lower Bucks

LANGHORNE, Mar. 6—B. Palmer Tomlinson, a member of Pineville Grange, was installed as master of Lower Bucks and Philadelphia Pomona Grange, No. 22, at its mid-Winter meeting held in the memorial house, here. The Middletown Grange was host at the meeting which was attended by 59 persons representing the seven subordinate Granges in this Pomona district.

Installation of the officers elected at the last meeting of Pomona was in charge of Pomona Deputy Frank L. Magill, a member of Tyro Hall Grange, who was assisted by Mrs. Earl D. Handy and Mrs. Lewis G. Anderson, also members of Tyro Hall Grange.

The meeting was featured by reports of several of the committee chairmen and during that time announcement was made by representatives of the legislative committee that the Grange is much opposed to the Disaffection Bill which is before the House. The Grange stands opposed to this bill because it provides for the restriction of free speech, censorship of the radio and restriction of the liberty of the press.

This bill, it was said, is supposed to serve as a check on communistic activities in this nation, but its wording will permit it to be used for other purposes.

Members of the new legislative committee include: Alvin Tomlinson, Pineville Grange; Roelofs Rice, Tyro Hall Grange; Ella Heavener, Delaware Valley; Dr. H. C. Terry, Middletown; Eva K. Preston, Carversville; and Edward Harding, Philadelphia Grange.

During the noon recess lunch was served in the fire hall by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Langhorne Fire Company.

Washington, Mar. 6—Military espionage by foreign governments and professional spies exists in this country today on a scale unprecedented since the World War.

Organized spies are actively at work in important military and naval concentrations, trying to obtain the secrets by which the United States developed some of the most efficient fighting weapons known to exist.

This was learned today following word from Los Angeles that a Federal Grand Jury had been summoned to look into the matter of spies on the Pacific Coast, who are engaged in handing over naval secrets to foreign powers.

The National Intelligence Division has now under surveillance more than a score of persons suspected of being engaged in espionage work.

Nullifies Locarno Treaty

Berlin, Germany, Mar. 6—Adolph Hitler has made up his mind to tell the world that the Franco-Soviet pact nullifies the treaty of Locarno, high Nazi officials told International News Service today, and the Fuehrer has summoned the Nazi Reichstag for next Friday, March 13, to meet to smash Europe's "security set up."

Friday the 13th comes at the end of the week, when according to all expectations, the French Senate will follow the Chamber of Deputies in ratifying the Soviet mutual aid alliance; and it comes three days before the first meeting of Germany's conscription and destruction of the Versailles Treaty. The Locarno Treaty provides for mutual assistance by major western and central European nations against unprojected aggression.

Five by Score of
43 to 32*GAME A SEE-SAW AFFAIR

A strong second half finish by the Odd Fellows enabled them to jump into third place in the Bristol Amateur League last night. The Oddies trimmed the Young Men's Association five, 43-32.

The teams did quite a bit of struggling in the first half with the lead changing at various intervals. The Oddies had a hard time getting started and spotted the Y's a 5-1 lead before five minutes had been played. However, before the end of the first ten minutes the Black and White team had shaved the lead to 12-11.

A regular see-saw affair followed. The Odd Fellows had the lead four times and the Y's deadlocked it four times. At half-time, the count stood 23-23. The next half was the ruination of the Y's. The Oddies began to hit the cords with rapidity and left the Hendricks behind.

Bobby Weideman and Danny Hines divided the scoring honors in field goals, with five each. Weideman also had a foul to his credit. For the losing aggregation, Bobby Hue with 10 points was high scorer, with Kleinfelder excelling on the defense.

RIDDING THE WOODS OF HALF-WILD DOGS
AND CATS NEAR HERE*Deputy Game Warden and Posse of Men Shoot
Several*KILLED YOUNG GAME*May Be Place of Origin For Rabies Cases In Township

Stray, half-wild dogs, as well as those left to run at large by irresponsible owners, are a serious menace to wild-life, the Game Commission announces in a state-wide appeal to sportsmen, farmers and other dog owners.

This is being demonstrated locally, since discovery of a pack of half-wild dogs which inhabit Rogers Woods, in Bristol Township.

Deputy game warden Daniel Potter, of Newportville, and a posse of about 16 men, have had good results in endeavoring to rid the township of this great menace, and to date have killed from the pack 12 animals, which it is claimed destroyed wild life and chickens.

On several different occasions deputy warden Potter has made treks to Rogers Woods, accompanied by several men. The animals were rounded up, and shot on sight. A 100-day quarantine was placed on dogs in the township several weeks ago, and officers are strictly enforcing it. Up to March 3rd, 82 dogs were shot in the township in an effort to prevent spread of rabies which has caused death of two people in the township in the past few months.

Mr. Potter and those carrying out this humane work, have found countless game destroyed in the area, mostly young rabbits. During the trips to Rogers Woods numerous cats have also been shot, the felines making their home in the woods, and some said to be dying of starvation.

Cases are reported of those who set traps for game in the woods, being freed by the dogs.

The Pennsylvania state game commission officials report that throughout other parts of the state hundreds of deer have already been killed by half-starved canines, made doubly bold and ferocious because they have been hampered in their forays by heavy snows, and sportsmen's associations and others interested are urged to cooperate with state agencies in an effort to put a stop to their depredations.

"It is even more important to keep your dogs tied up at this time of the year than it is during the nesting and breeding season for game," Game officials declared, adding that deer, rabbits and other creatures, weakened and emaciated by the severe winter, are unable to escape.

Controlling the half-wild dog is a big enough problem as it is, Game officials pointed out, without having to contend with those canines which are left to run at will by irresponsible owners. These dogs are not only a serious menace to game but have committed many depredations on livestock and poultry and in some cases have even attacked human beings.

Of particular interest is the fact that the majority of the dogs are of the German Shepherd or police species—powerful dogs, fully capable of outrunning and dispatching game in its present poor physical condition. The situation is serious, the Game Commission pointed out, although with the assistance of the Department of Agriculture and other agencies it is hoped to control it as quickly as possible.

Executive Committee of Fathers' Ass'n Meets

The executive board of the Fathers' Association of the Bristol public schools met last evening. Paul V. Forster, who presided, reported that the card party recently held under the joint auspices of the Mothers' and Fathers' Associations had proved to be a very successful occasion. He added that a number of members had not yet sent in their returns for tickets sold, and urged that an effort be made to have them do so promptly.

Johnston Hetherington, chairman of the entertainment committee, reported that at the meeting to be held March 18th, Coach William E. Dougherty will stage the annual exhibition of the high school gymnasium team. This, he said, will be more elaborate than any such exhibition ever held in the school, and will embody the finest display of gymnastic talent.

Reports on the activity of the recently organized gymnasium class of the association also proved very encouraging. Despite a rather late start, the various members are showing marked interest in the class, and there is every indication that it will become a real factor in the association's activities in the future. The meeting night has been changed from Monday to Tuesday.

Plans were also discussed for a supper meeting to be held in May in place of the regular meeting for that month. This will be the annual election of officers and an effort will be made to have special entertainment.

FIXING THE DATE

A British scientist, as he is described in news dispatches, predicts the depression will end September 16, 1936, basing his views on inscriptions found on the Great Pyramids of Egypt.

We are not prepared to discuss this method of prediction, which very likely is as good as any, but we do bridle at setting the date quite so definitely as that. When we went to school the duration of the Middle or Dark Ages became fixed so definitely in the minds of students that the teacher, who was conscientious enough to insist that history bear some relation to reality, frequently felt it necessary to remind us that those Ages never did begin or end.

The great movements of history begin so gradually and have their roots in such a variety of out-of-the-way places that any dates applied to them must be purely arbitrary. A war may be said to start on a certain date because a state of war—except in cases like the Italo-Abyssinian hostilities, which still are not a war—is something that in most countries has a legal definition. On the other hand, those who say that the Spanish War, for example, began with the declaration of April 21, 1898, or with the Maine episode are considered naive.

Generally speaking, great historical movements are said, for the sake of convenience, to have begun or ended on the date by which it was recognized and admitted widely that the condition referred to existed or was inevitable. But this is purely for the sake of convenience and is no nearer absolute truth than to say that the career of a plant begins as it sprouts out of the ground, when we all know that much of great importance has happened to it long before that.

The definite date is, admittedly, an aid to prophecy. Thus our own indigenous prophet, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, successfully forecast the end of the depression, not from the pyramids but from those other vast monuments to human folly, the depressions of 1873 and 1893. He said it would end in July, 1935, with a great revival of demand for durable goods. There was indeed a noticeable quickening of demand for durable goods during July and, for purposes of prophecy, the fact that demand for these goods existed both before and after July is neither here nor there.

In a manner of speaking, we should not be at all surprised if the depression ended on September 16, 1936.

"Punishment" of General Hagood Is an Affront to Congress

headed Administration seizes upon some detached and altogether innocent phrases to vent its concealed resentment against even a hint that it is wasting public money—when everybody KNOWS it is hardly doing anything else.

WASTING PUBLIC MONEY?

Upon a scale that takes away the breath of the nation and has already brought us so close to disaster that we are in danger every moment of pitching over the brink!

The question before Congress, however, is—SHALL WITNESSES, TESTIFYING BEFORE ITS COMMITTEES, BE SUBJECT TO INTIMIDATION?

SHALL TELLING THE TRUTH EXPOSE ONE TO PUNISHMENT?

Shall a distinguished officer of the Army be unable to discuss national defense before a Congressional Committee, or assist it in shaping a policy involving vast expenditure—because a nettled President, yielding to the pettiest resentment, has it in his power to punish him, if he finds his truthful evidence in the slightest degree unpalatable?

Who controls the access of Congress to the truth?

Who shall limit the right of the people's representatives to information for the purpose of legislating intelligently?

Can Congress regulate and direct its own inquiries?

Or does this power reside in the President, who will determine—for Congress—whom it may examine, what it shall investigate, what questions it shall ask, and even what a witness shall say or refrain from saying?

Far-reaching questions, indeed, are involved in this disgraceful persecution of General Hagood—QUESTIONS VITAL TO THE FREEDOM OF THE PEOPLE AND THE WELFARE OF THE NATION.

"DAUGHTERS OF VENUS"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

SYNOPSIS

Juliet Rankin's pulchritude wins her executive position in the beauty institute operated by wealthy Madame Hubert. At first, Thomas O'Hara, the handsome manager, is antagonistic towards Juliet, but he finally admits he is in love with her and has been trying to fight it. Due to his fatal resemblance to her dead sweetheart, Juliet submits to his caresses. Finding them together, Dr. Franz Von Guerdon, beauty specialist, also in love with Juliet, is insanely jealous. He threatens to kill Juliet if she bothers with O'Hara, stating that she belongs to him. Later, Juliet tries to convince O'Hara that they do not love each other but were both overcome with emotion that night she permitted him to kiss her. He shows her an engagement and a wedding ring, saying, "Here's how much I meant it—say that I was!" Juliet is assigned to work with Von Guerdon. It is when he concentrates on his work, ignoring her, that Juliet likes him best. Katie Schmidt, a lonely, poorly dressed, illiterate girl, calls for an estimate on a facial operation. Without flinching, Katie hears it would cost $3,000. Saying "I ain't got it and I will never have that much," she disappears into the obscurity from which she had come. Juliet refuses Von Guerdon's invitation to dinner. That night, lonely and restless, she regrets her action. She even welcomes a visit from meek, little McSpadden, who brings Juliet some plants for her new apartment.

CHAPTER XV

The cocktail reached McSpadden's taste with a cold dryish salute. It was sweet and acid simultaneously and it slipped easily down his throat. Somewhere in his interior it came to rest, and resolved into a warm golden bubble that expanded in the region of his solar plexus.

"Very pleasant, isn't it?" he inquired with a smile.

"I like them once in a while," Juliet admitted. "I was rather down tonight. Do you ever get down, Mr. McSpadden?"

"I never allow myself to," he said, as she refilled his glass. "You see I work in my garden after hours. Then too, Mrs. McSpadden is quite a conversationalist."

"I hope your wife isn't jealous?" said Juliet.

McSpadden quietly experimented with the second drink before answering.

"She is and she isn't," he declared profoundly. "I mean, she really isn't because she never has any reason—but you know what wives are. They all like to imagine things, I suppose."

Again the dry coldness of the second went to mingle with the golden glow of his first.

"No, Mrs. McSpadden is a splendid woman. I don't say she hasn't her faults—we all have—but by and large I couldn't have done better. Of course, I don't like arguments myself—never did. For instance, these flowers tonight. She thinks I was carrying them over to a fellow-gardener on this side of town. I mean, it saves argument. And there is nothing wrong in it, is there?"

"He was so beaming and kindly and innocent that Juliet—had he been a little boy—would have patted him on the unruly hair of his head and sent him home. He was pathetic, but not even cocktails could overcome his dullness."

"What you need," she told him pleasantly, "is one more drink and then I'm going to pack you off home."

A wave of confidence surged through McSpadden and he took the shaker from Juliet's hand.

"Allow me, please."

"Just as ever occurred to you," Juliet asked him suddenly, her mind reverting to business. "That our products, with all those fancy bottles and packages, are rather too expensive? I've been thinking that a much wider distribution might be practicable."

McSpadden balanced himself carefully and considered this thought.

"I'll tell you about that," he said, with a captain-of-industry frown. "Our policy has always been to put an expensive product on the market for the select trade."

Juliet knew this to be true but for some time she had been revolving the idea of a broader market. The Institute was immensely profitable but it served only those women who had plenty of money. Big as it was, there was still opportunity for expansion.

"I was wondering," she said, "if it wouldn't be possible to put up the same product in cheaper packages—under a separate trade name perhaps, and sell them through all the ten-cent stores in America. The profit would be small but the volume enormous."

As soon as these words had fallen from Juliet's lips she knew that she had stumbled upon a plan that would revolutionize Madame Hubert's business. It was a golden idea, an inspiration from heaven gry female voice, like an angry beating on a tin pan, triumphed above Juliet's words.

McSpadden's face wilted. Section by section, the lad of six—in kilts—ceased to exist and there of a frayed and middle-aged husband making a fool of himself. This latter self was all Mrs. McSpadden saw when her enormous figure sailed, all hot and pink and outraged, into the room.

"Good Lord, Emma!" came the sinking cry of despair from the whitening little man. "Why did you follow me?"

For the next three days Juliet's face burned every time she thought of the ignominious spectacle of Mrs. McSpadden literally dragging her crestfallen husband away.

"Good lord, Emma!" came the sinking cry of despair from the whitening little man. "Why did you follow me?"

knew where. It would not destroy what already was established. Juliet's head began to swim. The actual cost of the preparations was infinitesimal. Why not cut profits and distribute the products as widely as cigarettes or chewing gum? Millions of women have dimes to spend instead of dollars. The thrill of it coursed through every nerve in her body and brought a quickened brilliance to her eyes.

"There wouldn't be any trouble about manufacturing the products in quantities for the chain store trade," began McSpadden, and then oddly he stopped short and glanced at the radio. "That music reminds me—sounds sort of Scottish, doesn't it? Do you know, Miss Rankin, that I once did a Highland Fling at a school entertainment in kilts. I was a lad of six at the time. 'The Campbells are Coming'—ta ta—ta ta—ta ta, ta ta—"

McSpadden, still holding his empty glass, flung one hand over his head and reached the center of the room with a rather rusty whirl. All at once he had completely forgotten the cosmetic business, and then he had Juliet for she leaned against the wall and laughed until the tears streaked her face.

"A lively dance, if well done," he tossed over his shoulder to Juliet, and flung out one skinny leg.

But Juliet's attention was diverted from this remarkable exhibition by an imperative rapping upon the hall door.

"Just a minute, please," she told McSpadden, recovering herself.

He did not quite understand. "I'll hold the posture until you come back!" he cried. A hand was tossed over his head with a rakish Highland air, he still held his cocked glass, and a knobby knee was lifted and held rigidly at attention until Juliet returned.

The door swung open and an an-

Are you a STRANGER in your own home?

IT'S A FUNNY THING — but most people don't half see their own homes. We pass by both the fine points and the places that need fixing, without a glance, without a thought.

Yes, we all do this — until some day we decide to look around and really discover the place we live in. . . . Let's start with the living-room. That couch seat—how dingy and dull it looks. And there's a rough place where the cat sharpens his claws. The little rug in the hall is ragged and frayed. (Why, that's a disgrace!) And that table top certainly must be done over. The mantel looks positively bare, since Ted broke that lovely green vase. And all those magazines and papers—what we need is a good-looking stand to hold them.

You see the point. Lots of little things need doing. And it doesn't take lots of money to do them, one at a time. . . . Just make a list of what's needed and then keep watching the advertisements in this newspaper for good buys at low prices. Now's a fine time to find all sorts of good things for the house (February for furniture!), things you've been needing a long time, maybe, things you can have now without spending too much.

the Palais de Glace in Paris. Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino and about 30 extras are skating around tentatively on a circular ice rink. Only it isn't real ice but the new stuff that is made out of hypo (like they use in dark rooms) and 20 other ingredients.

A chemist named Benager Nudye (he's a graduate of the University of Kentucky) invented the "ice". He now comes out to inspect a patch where an extra has fallen. An assistant hurries out with a kettle of the mess. It's heated several hundred degrees above boiling.

A chap wanders over to watch. It's Jack Mulhall, star of yesterday, now playing a bit as the manager of the rink.

There is a minor commotion on the set as Douglas Fairbanks walks on. Everybody greets him, for he's not this long back from Europe. The trim, London-tailored Doug sights Mulhall and hails. They shake hands. Jack laughs.

"Do you remember?" he asks. "I owe you a two dollar football bet. But you can't come back after two years and expect to get paid."

Fairbanks slaps him on the back. "I'll tell you what I'll do though," says Mulhall. "I'm manager of this place and you can come in and skate as often as you like."

The drama of this scene gets you right away if you have been out here as many years as I have. We're on the "San Francisco" set at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It's the inside of a barn, turned into an emergency hospital after the San Francisco earthquake.

Clark Gable, in a torn dress suit and with a wound faked on his forehead catches your eye first. But then you see a white-haired man dressed as an intern. His face is familiar. It is King Baggott, who had made 300 pictures up to 1920 and who was a great star.

He is one of the crowd now. And there is Rosemary Theby, bending over an injured child on a cot. You look some more, and you spot Helen Chadwick, Mary MacLaren, Flora Finch among the refugees.

Director W. S. Van Dyke is talking to a handsome blonde woman. It is Gertrude Astor, who has a little scene with Gable.

Clark wanders over to say hello. "How does it make you feel when you look around you?" I ask him. He gives me a straight, serious look.

"Every time I go off a set like this," he says, "I go buy myself another annuity."

The lines they speak, and the things they do when the camera is turning, sometimes seem pretty tame when you watch these dramas on the set every day, as I do.

CURIOSITY KILLED RAT

LORAIN, O. — (INS) — Curiosity may have killed a cat, but Lorain had a rat to which curiosity was fatal, also. Stephen Rehoreg reported that while investigating the inside of his radio in an effort to determine why it had ceased to function, he discovered a rat that had become entangled in the wires and died.

PLAN GARDEN EARLY: INCLUDE NECESSARY FOODS FOR HEALTH

By Rhondena A. Armstrong (Home Economics Representative)

Start planning your vegetable garden now. Winter evenings are ideal to look over seed catalogues and begin plans for your garden. Remember that a garden is an excellent way to supply an ample quantity of fresh vegetables for every member of the family during the growing season and also supply enough vegetables to can and store for use during the winter months.

The choice of vegetables is also important for the adequate nourishment of your family. All gardens should include sufficient greens, tomatoes, and other vegetables such as peas, carrots, corn, and beans to meet these food requirements. Follow the vegetable rule of two vegetables besides potatoes daily and tomatoes three times a week.

Choice of vegetables should also be considered when you plan the canning and storing for next winter's use. Why not make your canning interesting by using a definite plan? Sheets on "Planning the Canning" can be secured at the Extension Office.

This plan enables each woman to know how much and the definite vegetables to can and store to meet the best nutritional needs of her family and it is a good guide, too, for planning the garden that is to supply these foods.

Interest may be added this year by planning to grow a few new vegetables. New vegetables usually are met with enthusiasm and they certainly add variety to the meals.

The nutritional value of vegetables cannot be over-emphasized. They supply our bodies with starch for energy and pep, roughage which keeps the body regular, minerals for bone and teeth development, and vitamins which "keep us growing and going."

THIRD WARD RANGERS REGISTER SIXTH WIN

The Third Ward Rangers continued to set the pace of the Bristol Amateur League by registering their sixth straight triumph last night, beating the St. Ann's A. A. five, 33-20, in a game which was purely defensive the first half and offensive the second.

The Rangers and Saints were guarding close the first 20 minutes of the fray. For 12 minutes the Purple and Gold could not register a double-decker. And it was Bill McCoy who broke the spell. McCoy also scored the second twin-pointer for the Saints which represented their only scoring in the first half.

The Rangers were also held from scoring high. During the first half only four double-deckers were made by the Purple and Gold. During the second half, however, they were able to score 19 points to lead the club to victory. Morrissey had seven, making a total of 29 points to the Burlington lads during the second half. They also had four goals in the first half to make them the leaders of the tilt with 21 points.

It was Bill McCoy who kept the Saints in the game. Bill hit the nets for a total of 11 points, five double-deckers and a foul.

The games were refereed by Teddy Kearns, former manager of the Trenton Moose, in the American League. Kearns will also officiate at the game Monday night when the Hibernians meet the Young Men's Association and the Moose plays St. Ann's.

MORRISVILLE GOES TO FINALS; DEFEATS YARDLEY

By Jack Orr

Coach John Hoffman's Blue and Gold quintet earned the right to battle the strong Sellersville-Perkasie High team when they defeated a scrappy Yardley High School five, 30-22, in the opener last night.

Yardley put up a stronger battle than was expected when they played inspired basketball at various stages of the game. They weakened, however, when the going was rough and the Bulldogs went on to bigger things.

The up-river champions took a 9-5 lead at the quarter, made it 18-12 at the half and finished up with twelve points in the last two cantos.

Coach Hoffman used his reserves frequently and saved his varsity five for their clash tonight in the P. I. A. A. state tourney held at Norristown. They battle Souderton, winners of the Bux-Mont conference.

Captain Craig White, handsome Bulldog guard, had six field goals to lead the Blue and Gold followed by Frank Blumot who was good for a quintet of twin pointers. Tom Neilly and Buzz Parks were high for the hard fighting losers with eight and six respectively. Neilly made four of his four gift throws.

FLYING FISTS MARK BASKETBALL GAME HERE

(By Jack Orr)

Amidst flying fists and near riots, Sellersville-Perkasie High School advanced to the finals of the Bucks County Tourney by eking a close 29-27 decision over Quakertown's big five in another extra period ball game, here, last night.

It was Rabbit Witwer who put the game on the ice for the minions of jovial Coach Earle Druckerhuimer and sent them into the finals of the tournament, meeting Morrisville High's Blue and Gold champions of the Lower Bucks County circuit, tomorrow night.

Witwer dropped a pair of field goals in the thrilling three-minute extra can to accounting for all of the Gray and Blue's scoring in the extra period. Tom Hackett and Iggy Badman, six-foot center from Quakertown, converted their fouls to account for the Quakers' tallies.

The latter was eliminated from the fray along with Jim Hackett, the other elusive forward for Sell-Perk, because of fighting. After Badman had fouled the diminutive Hackett, Hack turned to battle it out with his big rival. The bout was soon stopped but both men were sent from the contest.

At the end of the regulation time the count was deadlocked at 25-all and the teams took the field to battle in a three-minute overtime session.

Witwer made one from the side, his sixth field goal of the evening, and Fluck converted his foul for Quakertown to make the count 27-25 in favor of Sell-Perk. Witwer on an identical shot cut the cords and the game was about over. Badman made his foul count as the game ended.

Rabbit Witwer led the up-county lads with seven field goals along with a pair of gift shots, while Al Fly, undersized forward from Quakertown, was high with five double-deckers.

HIGH SCHOOL "GYM" TEAM TO GO TO PHILA.

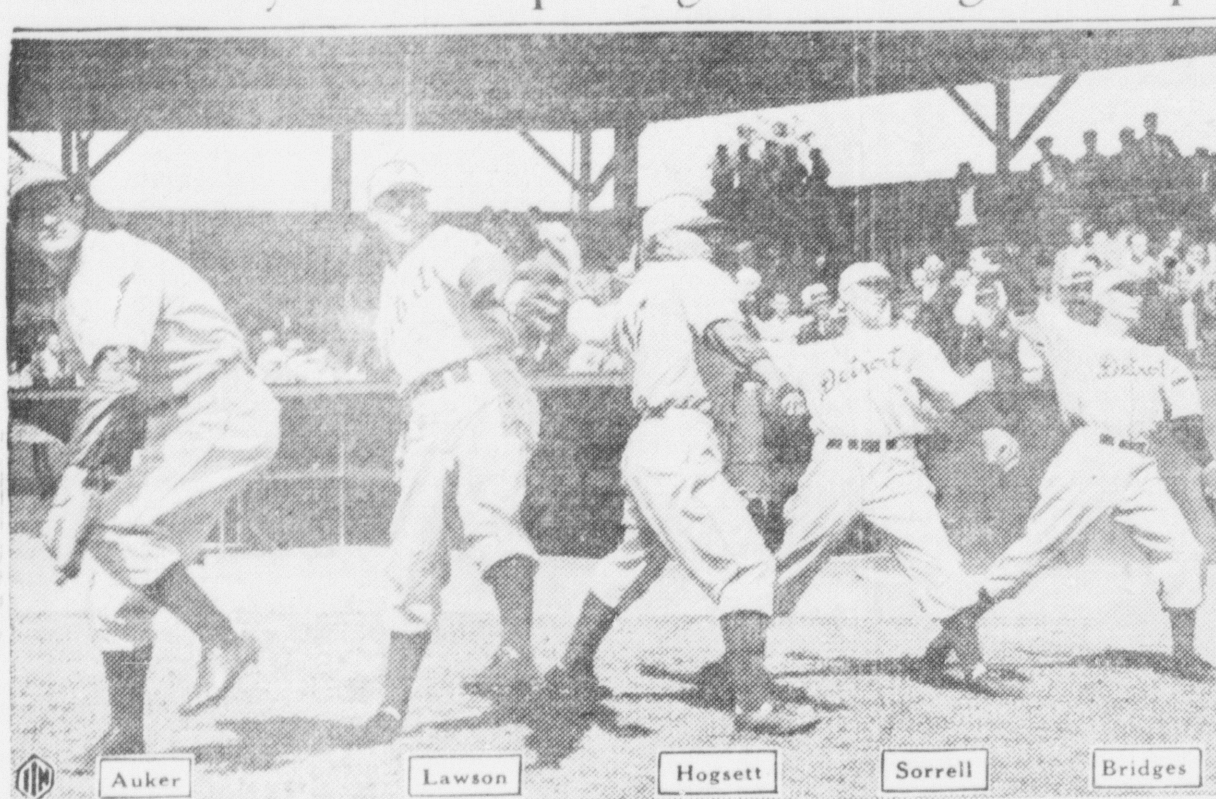

The District One Championships of the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association will be participated in by the boys' gymnastic team of Bristol high school at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, tomorrow. Coach William Dougherty will take several of his proteges to the Quaker city to compete.

The first three contestants in each event will represent District One in the regional meet at Temple University, on March 10th, and the first six placing in events at Temple will be representatives of the Eastern part of the state against gymnasts from Western Pennsylvania at Pennsylvania State College on March 21st.

At the University of Pennsylvania, Saturday, championship events in swimming and volleyball will also be conducted, but Bristol will have no entrants in these events.

Preliminary events are scheduled from 10:30 to 12 o'clock noon, with the finals getting underway at 1:30 p. m. The contestants are required by state officials to do prescribed exercises. These will count 10 points, while optional exercises will count five points. Three judges will be selected by the district, and the contestants will be

Schoolboy Misses Opening Bell at Tiger Camp

Although Schoolboy Rowe was detained by his duties as instructor at a baseball training school at Hot Springs, Ark., when the world champion Detroit Tigers opened training camp at Lakeland, Fla., among the hurlers on hand for the opening practice were, left to right, Eldon Auker, Roxie Lawson, Chief Hogsett, Vic Sorrell and Tommy Bridges.

Judged on form, fluency, and difficulty of exercises. Places for team scoring will count 5-3-1.

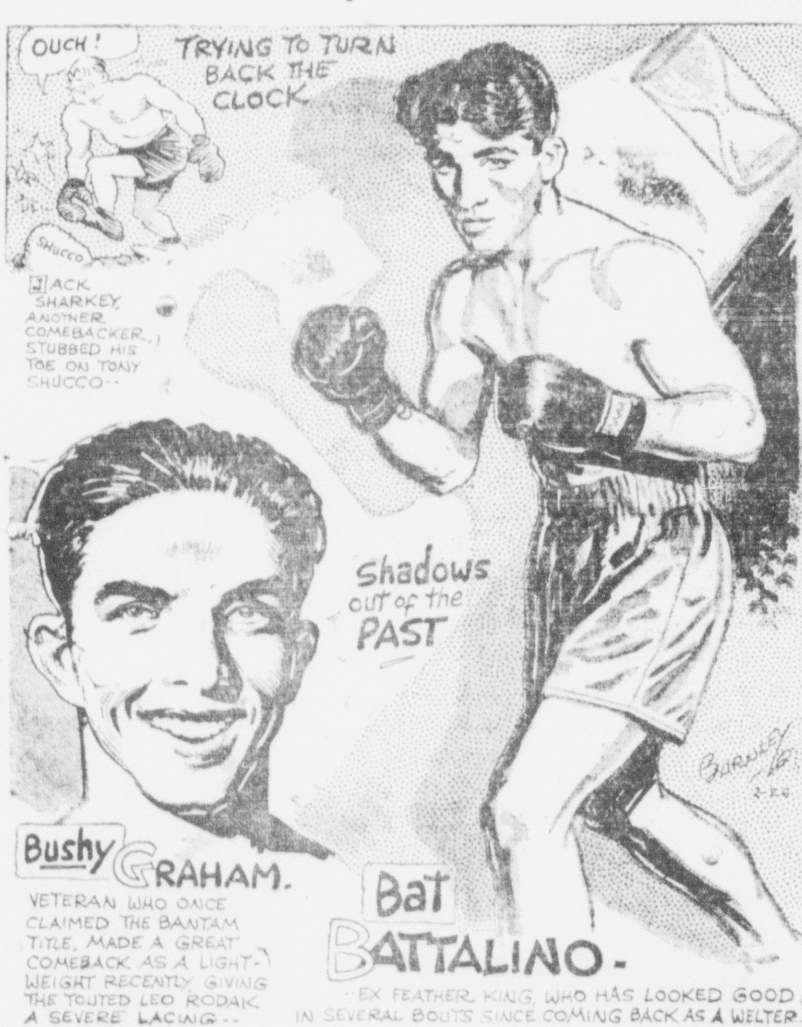

This is the first year the district has had competition in gymnastic exercises. Awards made will be in circulation perpetually, unless won three years (not consecutively) by one team. Individual prizes will be gold, silver and bronze medals.

Participants from Bristol high school's "gym" team will be:

Fistic Ghosts Walk Again

By BURNLEY

Pugilistic shadows of the past are rising out of the mythical fistic graveyards to frighten the present-day leather fingers, while incidentally handing them a few stiff belts on the lug.

Which is another way of saying that several old-timers, who have long since been consigned to the cauliflower boneyard, are now back in action and seem to be doing a pretty good job of pinning back the ears of the younger generation of knuckle knockers.

Consider the case of specimen No. 1, the veteran Bushy Graham, who was once in the dim past a leading bantamweight and claimant of the 115-lb. diadem. Bushy was then known as the Utica jumping jack, and his bounding windmill style made him a real nuisance to the other bantams, as Bud Taylor can tell you.

However, Master Graham was never too careful about keeping in shape, and when the spring began to go out of his legs, his bounding tactics lost some of their bounce and the other boys began to bounce him off the canvas.

Well, to make a long story longer, Graham passed into fistic oblivion more than three years ago, yet who should pop up at New York's Madison Square Garden the other week but this same Bushy, now a lightweight and with nearly all his old speed. The erstwhile bantamweight proceeded to give highly-toned Leo Rodak a terrific lacing, cutting him hither and yon with all his old abandon, and even Rodak had to laugh when they called it a draw.

Another fistic ghost who has returned to the arena is the ex-feather king, Bat Battalino. Bat is now a welterweight, and a pretty good one, if we can judge from the way he annihilated Brescia Garcia, who gave Canzoneri a good argument recently.

the same opinion. The body was lying at the extreme opposite side of the pavement from the curb and the only mark on the body was an injury to the nose, evidently inflicted when the man fell.

The handlers of Tony Maglione, local scrapper who put up such a plucky battle against a much more experienced fighter last Monday night at the St. Ann's boxing show, caused a great laugh between the first and second rounds when one of them grabbed the lad and held his head, while the other cut his hair with a pair of scissors.

The reason of course was that his hair, entirely too long for the well-being of Mr. Maglione, was getting in his eyes... we have seen a good many tight seconds work on their men between rounds... and have seen them do some very strange things... that is from the writer's point of view... but never cut their hair before.

Speaking of hair... we have noticed any number of boys enter the ring with flowing locks that annoyed them throughout the entire fight... forcing them to brush it back with their gloved hand continually... this is a very bad practice... for, while they are busy attending to their hair their opponent is apt to slap them down.

While on this subject... many of our readers who attended the Trenton Arena when the Mofo boys were in the ring recall that Jeff Smith, that great middleweight of a decade ago, would sit between rounds as cool and collected as though he were in the parlor of his home, with Al Lippe, his manager, leaning over the ropes behind him with a comb, quietly combing his hair back... when Smith answered the bell for the last round he looked as fresh as he did when he started... psychology, my boys... the opponent usually tired out labored under the impression during the bout that he couldn't possibly win.

Lenny Dever, the fourth ward youngster who battled Sammy Manzo... certainly deserves the pain for his great display of grit last Monday night at the Mutual Aid Hall... Dever, as game a guy as ever came down the pike, stole the show with his pluck... we were pleased to see the improvement in physical condition shown by the local scrappers... we hope they continue the good work.
